No pants, no problem for exhibitionist comedy event

Trouser-less. Hundreds turned out yesterday for the annual No Pants Subway Ride.

Dorchester resident Andrew Walbrown stood amid a crowd of hundreds at Pemberton Square yesterday, patiently awaiting the go-ahead to remove his pants and ride the T.

"I've always been a nudist at heart, so I could go all day without wearing clothes in public," said Walbrown, who participated in Boston's seventh annual No Pants Subway Ride, organized by a self-described "society of shenanigans," BostonSOS.

The comedy event was first created by Improv Everywhere in New York City in 2002, and now happens each January in cities across the globe.

"I feel there's nothing to be ashamed of, so this was never awkward for me. I feel at home," said Walbrown, adding that yesterday's 50-degree windy weather didn't faze him.

"A lot of people might complain, but years past there has been three inches of snow ... and 20 degrees," he said.

Inside the T, passengers who weren't too engrossed in books or smartphones appeared bewildered and amused, some going so far as to question pantless participants about their apparent wardrobe malfunctions.

"Being Boston, I'm not really that surprised," said a passenger who went by Katie G. "Because it's not atypical to see someone undressing or wearing extravagant clothing on the T, especially the Orange Line."

BPD to appear in Super Bowl coverage

Boston police officers respond with their guns drawn as hear the second bomb go off at the Boston Marathon in April. / BOSTON GLOBE VIA GETTY IMAGES

While it's still not clear if the New England Patriots will play in this year's Super Bowl, it is clear that members of the Boston Police Department will be appearing in coverage of the big game.

Boston police officers who responded to the bombings at the Boston Marathon will appear in a taped segment to air during the pregame coverage on Fox, according to the department.

Newly named police Commissioner William Evans, Patriots owner Robert Kraft, former Patriot players Matt Chatham and Joe Andruzzi and other police officers taped a segment at the Boston Public Library in Copley Square on Friday. In the segment, current and former NFL players read the Declaration of Independence as a way to honor the country and great Americans, Boston police said.

According to the Boston Police Department, Kraft requested that Boston police officers join him in the segment.

This year's Super Bowl will take place Feb. 2 at MetLife Stadium in New Jersey. MICHAEL NAUGHTON

Bulger now in Arizona prison

If he hadn't already been convicted and sentenced to life in prison, it'd appear James "Whitey" Bulger were on the run again.

Bulger, the 84-year-old Boston mob boss, has been moved yet again to a new federal prison facility.

The federal Bureau of Prisons recently updated Bulger's location status. He is now in a facility in Tuscon, Ariz., after most recently spending his time at an Oklahoma facility.

United States Penitentiary Tucson is described on the Bureau of Prisons website as a high-security facility with an adjacent minimum security satellite camp. The facilities hold about 1,700 male inmates. METRO

BARBARA ANTHONY

ANTHONY IS THE STATE'S UNDERSECRETARY OF CONSUMER AFFAIRS AND BUSINESS REGULATION

TARGETED BY A CYBER ATTACK?

I was shopping at my local Target on Black Friday. Could I be a victim of identity theft? What can I do if someone has stolen my credit card information?

Consumers who shopped at Target stores in the U.S. between Nov. 27 and Dec. 15, 2013, should immediately check their debit and credit card statements for suspicious activity and request a new card from their bank.

Stolen card numbers are already being sold on the black market, and thieves may try to use this information to make fraudulent purchases or even take out additional credit in your name.

Visit www.annualcreditreport.com for free copies of your credit report.

Review your credit report carefully to make sure all the information is correct, and report any wrong information to the credit reporting bureau.

The heat in my apartment hasn't been very strong lately and some mornings my roommate and I wake up freezing. I tried calling my landlord, but he hasn't returned my calls. What can we do to get our heat working?

If your heating system isn't working, it isn't just unsafe, it is illegal.

Quoted

Stolen card numbers are already being sold on the black market, and thieves may try to use this information to make fraudulent purchases.

Your landlord has a responsibility to keep your heat running throughout the cold months.

You should immediately contact your local board of health or inspectional services department and ask that they send an inspector to your apartment.

If the inspector finds that your heating systems are not up to par, they can cite your landlord for a violation and will help get your heat running again.

Do not hesitate to call my office's consumer hotline at (888) 283-3757 to report a heating problem.

Each month Undersecretary of Consumer Affairs and Business Regulation Barbara Anthony will answer consumer questions from Metro readers. Send your questions to consumer.communications@state.ma.us with "Ask the Undersecretary" in the subject line.

MassDOT plans for improvements to highways, MBTA

Capital Investment Plan. MassDOT gets ready to beef up the state's transportation network.

A new Green Line fleet is coming soon. / NICOLAUS CZARNECKI, METRO

Basing its plans on current state funding projections, the state Department of Transportation said it aims to sink money into upgrading the state's highways and bridges, replacing MBTA trains and trollies and reducing traffic congestion, among other things.

MassDOT late on Thursday released its 65-page, five-year capital investment plan, which outlines a $12.4 billion program that would make long-term investments in the state's transportation network.

The plan includes $1.3 billion to complete the Green Line Extension, providing full service to Somerville and Medford by 2020. An investment of $835 million would be used to start a $1.3 billion replacement of 43-year-old Red Line and 31-year-old Orange Line vehicles, and also to make improvements to tracks, signals and systems.

The entire Green Line fleet would be replaced by 2021 for the price tag of $2.6 million, according to the plan.

Transportation officials also aim to get the ball rolling on the South Coast Rail, finish all electronic tolling on the I-90 Turnpike and complete track and signal projects to allow permanent service on the Cape Flyer. An investment of $252 million will expand Silver Line service and establish a new "Indigo Line" using the Fairmount commuter rail corridor, providing faster, more reliable service to that region.

Todashev report to be released

The clock has reportedly started ticking down to the FBI's release of a report into the May 22, 2013, Florida shooting death of Ibragim Todashev, a reported friend of deceased Boston Marathon bombing suspect Tamerlan Tsarnaev.

Varying news accounts around the time of Todashev's death said Todashev had been ready to sign a confession for his role in a September 2011 triple homicide in Waltham.

FBI and Massachusetts State Police were present when Todashev was killed. The Boston Globe reported Thursday that investigators have completed the death report, and the FBI is "eager" to release it. SHNS

Love and marriage (and divorce)

Ah, weekends. The perfect time to relax, sleep in and grab brunch. Or, if you're a celebrity, get married or divorced. Here's this weekend's notable unions and dissolutions.

First up is Hilary Duff and ex-NHL star Mike Comrie, who announced in a statement over the weekend that they "have mutually decided to an amicable separation" and will "remain best friends and will continue to be in each other's lives." The two are parents to the toddler Luca, of whom they'll have joint custody.

It certainly looks like an amicable split with Duff tweeting, "Mike and I are sitting here, we are so appreciative for all of your kindness & well wishes." She continued, "Not an easy day but we're getting thru it together."

Meanwhile, Pamela Anderson and pop culture footnote Rick Salomon (he's the guy who made Paris Hilton famous when he starred as the other half in that sex tape) announced their marriage over the weekend. "We're very happy," Anderson disclosed to E!. "Our families are very happy and that's all that matters." It's the second marriage for the couple — to each other. They were married for 10 weeks in 2007.

Someone else you need to send a wedding present to? Whitney Houston's daughter, Bobbi Kristina Brown, apparently married her "adopted" brother Nick Gordon last week, according to TMZ.com. Although the two claim that Cissy Houston OK'd the marriage, TMZ reports that's a lie and that Grandma Houston is none too pleased about the union. And really, how can you be?

Talking points

Bynes is back in school

Amanda Bynes is going back to school — or at least it seems she was planning to. The troubled former child star reportedly enrolled for classes at the Orange County campus of the Fashion Institute of Design and Merchandising that began last week, though she was apparently a no-show on the first day, according to E!. Bynes had made it clear via her lawyer that once she was out of treatment at a psychiatric facility she wanted to pursue a career in fashion, and she toured the FIDM campus in early December.

Serving up some serious side-eye

Box office. Soldiers conquered the competition with the SEAL-based "Lone Survivor."

Top 5 earners

1. 'Lone Survivor,' $38.5 million
2. 'Frozen,' $15.1 million
3. 'The Wolf of Wall Street,' $9 million
4. 'The Legend of Hercules,' $8.6 million
4. 'American Hustle,' $8.6 million

"Lone Survivor," the true story of a failed U.S. Navy SEALs mission to capture or kill a Taliban leader in Afghanistan, collected $38.5 million in U.S. and Canadian ticket sales, topping movie "Frozen" to win the weekend box office race.

The film stars Mark Wahlberg as Marcus Luttrell, the only one of four SEALS to return from the mission and author of the 2007 book on which the movie is based.

The heavily marketed film far exceeded industry projections of about $23 million in domestic sales, including theaters in the United States and Canada. It was the second biggest January opening weekend ever, behind only "Cloverfield," which made $40 million, according to Rentrak.

Decent reviews along with what Nikki Rocco, Universal Pictures president for domestic distribution, called "a grassroots campaign to tell Americans that this is a story of patriotism and heroism, and you're going to want to be a part of the water cooler conversation about it on Monday," sent its box office sales soaring.

"Frozen," a Walt Disney animated film and last week's box office winner, was second with ticket sales of $15.1 million from Friday through Sunday.

"The Wolf of Wall Street," a tale of greed starring Leonardo DiCaprio, was third with $9 million, while this week's other new major release, "The Legend of Hercules," starring Kellan Lutz, was just behind, selling $8.6 million in tickets.

"Hercules" was tied for fourth place with "American Hustle," an awards-season favorite directed by David O. Russell and starring Jennifer Lawrence and Bradley Cooper.

"The Hobbit: The Desolation of Smaug" was sixth with $8 million. After leading the domestic box office during the last three weeks of 2013, the movie has hauled in $242 million domestically and $809 million globally. REUTERS

Tina Fey and Amy Poehler might be the best hosting duo ever. For a complete list of the night's big winners, visit Metro.us. / GETTY IMAGES Awards. Tina Fey and Amy Poehler killed it as the hosts of the 2014 Golden Globes.

Let's be honest: Tina Fey and Amy Poehler could walk onstage and fart into the mic and everyone would be pressing toward the stage to get a whiff. So it's no big surprise that they had the audience eating out of their hands last night. These ladies give good joke.

"Welcome to the 71st annual Tina Fey and Amy Poehler Lee Daniels' The Butler Golden Globes," Fey opened, while Poehler took a moment to thank the "women and gay men watching at home."

One target for the night was Tom Hanks, who Poehler called out as "Tam Honks." "Damn, I knew I would mess that up!" she muttered, as the camera shot to Hanks, who agreeably mugged annoyance. Everyone is agreeable at the Globes, because everyone is drunk. We'd like to think that includes Tam Honks. Ahem, Tom Hanks. We are drunk for the Globes, too.

Nobody was safe from the comedy barbs that fell from the mouths of these babes: "George Clooney would rather float away into space and die than spend one more minute with a woman his age," Fey quipped. (P. Diddy and Bryan Cranston liked this.)

"If I wanted to see Jonah Hill masturbate at a pool party, I'd go to one of Jonah Hill's pool parties," Poehler said in regard to "The Wolf of Wall Street." That wasn't the only penis joke. Poehler informed the crowd that Hanks was presently wearing a prosthetic penis.

Finally, Poehler shouted out her alma mater, quipping, "'Masters of Sex' ... is the degree I got from Boston College" and high-fived Fey, who countered with the only joke that fell flat, saying, "'The Blacklist' is who is invited to my room later." It was the only awkward moment in a monologue that proved why these ladies booked a multi-year gig. They're the best.

Speaking of best, that's just what was honored, though there were a few big upsets. Jon Voight beat out Aaron Paul for Best Supporting Actor in a TV Series, Miniseries or TV Movie for Showtime's "Ray Donovan," while Amy Adams dethroned Hollywood's reigning queen Meryl Streep, taking home Best Actress in a Motion Picture, Drama, Comedy or Musical for "American Hustle." "Hustle" also gave Jennifer Lawrence an emotional win for Best Supporting Actress. The stirring "12 Years a Slave" almost went completely overlooked — finally having its well-deserved moment at the very end, winning for Best Picture, Drama.

In TV, "Behind the Candelabra" dominated, while Andy Samberg had a surprising win for "Brooklyn Nine-Nine" — which also took best TV Series, Comedy.

Other highs included Diane Keaton singing "Make New Friends" as an ode to Woody Allen and Poehler celebrating her win for Best Actress for "Parks and Recreation" by making out with Bono. Well, it was just that kind of night.

NEW in the new year

NEW YEAR, NEW JOB

Start the new year with renewed dedication to landing the job you've always wanted. / COLOURBOX

All you. Some attitude changes and refreshing perspectives can make this the year your job search takes off.

Presents have been opened, Santa has come and gone, and all that remains from your holiday baking is stale gingerbread — and no one knows if it's still good. The holidays are officially over, which means it's time to put some lessons to work in your job search.

The new year is the perfect time for some classic "out with the old, in with the new" thinking, so reflect upon your seasonal cheer and use it to move forward in landing your dream job.

Embrace your inner snowflake

As the saying goes, no two snowflakes are alike — and the same should go for you. Managers and recruiters interview hundreds of people a month. They've heard the typical rehearsed answers time and time again. What they're looking for is something different — that something that makes you unique and sets you apart from the rest of the pile of résumés.

That's not to say don't prepare, but let your personality shine through when you attend an interview. Being unique will help you stand out.

Makeover magic

Make a fresh start

Pull yourself together when handing out résumés or going on interviews. No one's going to hire the tired-eyed youngster with disheveled hair. Taking the time to update your look, get a new haircut and (of course) make sure your résumé is eye-catching will make your job search that much more successful in the new year.

Ask those you trust to give feedback on your résumé and your job-interview look so it's polished and road-tested before you end up in the interview chair. Take the energy of the new year and put it into yourself.

Get over it

The end of the holidays is always a sad time. Nothing pains the heart more than seeing those bows shoved back in the ribbon drawer and the tree stuffed sadly in the attic for another year.

But it's over. You enjoyed it, now move on. Don't let yourself sit longingly in front of the TV, hopelessly waiting for "Home Alone" to come back on. Instead, pick up that laptop and finish that résumé. Research job openings. Get connected with various contacts who might know of potential employment opportunities. Ask yourself: Where do you want to be at this time next year? LEAH RUEHLICKE

♎ Libra | Sept. 23-Oct. 22. Don't expect talks to occur without a hitch. Controversy can be expected, along with uncertainty, disagreements and a debate that will require a well-rounded point of view.

♏ Scorpio | Oct. 23-Nov. 21. You need to listen instead of talking. Protect your health and your wealth. If you make a snap decision, you can expect opposition. Focus on self-improvement, romance and keeping the peace.

♐ Sagittarius | Nov. 22-Dec. 21. You should make abrupt changes in order to take everyone by surprise and buy time to maneuver your way into a key position. BERNICE BEDE OSOL

Take away the freedom to exploit workers

Re: 'Bad economics' (Metro, Jan. 10-12) I totally disagree with Alton Yee construing the Affordable Care Act, minimum wage law and unemployment insurance to mean the taking away of our "economic freedoms." I think most will consider these laws as protections. For some time now, U.S. businesses have driven down our quality of life while collecting record profits.

There was a time when most heads of the households were paid a "family wage." Today, if you are able to be paid a "living wage" you're better off than most. If our government does take away any of our freedoms I hope it's the freedom to exploit others.

If U.S. businesses sincerely offered fair opportunities and proper compensation for our labor, we would not need the aforementioned programs.

No joke, Christie

If New Jersey Gov. Chris Christie thinks that firing Bridget Kelly and spending two hours on TV declaring himself an innocent non-bully will solve the problem that he and his staff created, he's wrong. Crimes were committed. If you or I or anyone reading this paper went out on I-95 and put up traffic cones, choked interstate traffic and commerce and impeded first responders, we would be arrested instantly. Christie is the governor and had to know that the main highway between his state and New York City was blocked for days. He did nothing. He joked about it.

Manning, Brady to meet again in AFC title game

NFL. The Patriots will take on the Broncos in Denver this coming Sunday with a Super Bowl berth on the line.

Ten years ago this week, the nation was bracing for Tom Brady and Peyton Manning to clash for the first time in the postseason in the AFC title game. While much has changed in the sports world since Jan. 18, 2004, a day when Ty Law picked off Manning three times in a 24-14 Patriots win, one thing remains in place — Brady and Manning are the class of the American Football Conference when it comes to quarterback play. The two old rivals will square off this coming Sunday, Jan. 19, 2014, with a trip to Super Bowl XLVIII in New Jersey on the line.

Manning and the Broncos held off the Chargers Sunday in Denver, 24-17, as Manning threw for 230 yards, two touchdowns and an interception. Brady was pedestrian in the Pats' 43-22 win over the Colts this past Saturday night, throwing for 198 yards on 13-of-25 passing. He did not throw a pick or a touchdown and posted a 78.4 passer rating as the New England running game led the way.

While Brady has dominated the head-to-head matchup against Manning (a 10-4 overall record), it's worth noting that the two haven't squared off in the postseason since January of 2007 when Manning's Colts came back to stun the Pats, 38-34, in the conference title game. And while the perception is that Brady owns Manning in the postseason, the two have met just three times, with No. 12 holding a 2-1 advantage over No. 18.

The Patriots will be on the road in the AFC title game for the first time since the loss to the Colts. The Pats are 2-1 in the Brady/Bill Belichick era in road AFC Championship games, having beaten the Steelers twice in Pittsburgh. Manning will be playing in his first AFC title game since the 2009 season, when his Colts beat the Jets, 30-17, in Indy.
